

SNHS: Making Marking Matter

High quality marking and feedback is essential so that

- students can understand what they have achieved and what they can do to improve further,
- students can become self-critical independent learners
- student achievement can be celebrated and self-esteem developed
- parents / carers are informed of their child's attainment, progress and attitude to learning
- teachers can assess and reflect on the impact of teaching
- learning can be effectively differentiated
- learning needs can be identified and approaches evaluated
- attitudes to learning can be diagnosed and recognised

Of course, Departments have different assessment requirements and need to have the flexibility to meet these.
However all Departments' procedures must utilise these guidelines.
